

What we do

The IEBA provides support and assistance to our colleagues in the electrical industry and their families, in need of help.

Founded in 2001, the IEBA has been active in helping many members of the electrical industry, and their families, who have experienced difficulties with, for example, bereavement, mental health issues, terminal illness, accidental death, specific treatments, or retraining. The association has and continues to make a real difference to the lives of electrical industry employees and their families. With your help, awareness and support, the IEBA can do a lot more to assist those less fortunate in the electrical industry in Ireland.

Who Qualifies?

To qualify for IEBA's assistance, an individual would need to satisfy at least one of the following criteria:

- Previous experience of working within the electrical sector.

and/or

- A person(s) who is or has been engaged in the trade and shall include widows, widowers, and immediate dependents of such person's.

and/or

- Have a need for financial assistance.

We help both full-time and part-time workers and partners are also eligible. Both partners can be beneficiaries if they satisfy the criteria. The benefit can transfer to spouses and long-term partners on the death of the beneficiary.

We help a wide variety of people who used to work in our industry, from warehousemen to checkout operators to delivery drivers and each case is assessed confidentially on its individual merits.
